References

1. NHS England. Clinical Commissioning Policy: Microprocessor Controlled Prosthetic Knees. 2016.
2. Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services. Lower Limb Prosthetic Workgroup Consensus Document. Consensus Document. Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services; 2017 September 2017.
3. McGrath M, Gray LA, Rek B, Davies KC, Savage Z, McLean J, et al. Can microprocessor knees reduce the disparity in trips and falls risks between above and below knee prosthesis users? PloS one. 2022;17(9):e0271315.
4. Hahn A, Bueschges S, Prager M, Kannenberg A. The effect of microprocessor controlled exo-prosthetic knees on limited community ambulators: systematic review and meta-analysis. Disability and rehabilitation. 2022;44(24):7349–67.
5. Davie-Smith F, Carse B. Comparison of patient-reported and functional outcomes following transition from mechanical to microprocessor knee in the low-activity user with a unilateral transfemoral amputation. Prosthet Orthot Int. 2021;45(3):198–204.
6. Visagie S, Theron B. South African Users' Function and Experience with a Magnetorheological Microprocessor Knee: A Mixed Methods Study. Canadian Prosthetics & Orthotics Journal. 2025;8(1):1–9.